SONNET—MY LIFE.

BY WILLIAM ALEXANDER.

My life is like a river's rapid course,
Which, ever devious, noiseless steals along
Through vales, o'er crags, hills, fairy meads
Still hastening farther from its parent source—
Now rill-like, clear, it murmuringly flows,
Awhile, faint lingering on its native plain,
Then restless, turbulent, into the main,
With muddy waters, it impetuous goes—
My life's stream—may it ever onward glide,
Through peaceful ways and scenes obscure
Nor let false honor's sanguinary palm,
Nor gold, nor vice pollute its rolling tide—
Still, crystal-like, pellucid let it be,
Till o'er the steep it falls into eternity.
